

KILLER STRANGELETS

an arctic 6 adventure

by C.T. Furlong

The first of three ARCTIC 6 adventures for teenage readers.

This adrenaline packed thriller follows the exploits of the fifteen year old Iago, his cousins, Cam, Tara and Renny, and his younger sister, Aretha. Joined by their friend, the bewitching Charlie, they embark on a mission to save Iago's father who has been accidentally kidnapped – by perhaps the maddest of all possible mad scientists.

Carol Furlong handles high tech communications with the ease of a teenage whizz!

'How can I, Iago Johnson, a) know anything about the fate of the universe and, b) be in any kind of position to change it...? I am not a superhero, I'm not a genius. I'm not even very good at science...'

Forced to take action, the A.R.C.T.I.C. 6 embark on their first mission!

The intended kidnap victim: not Iago's father but his uncle, Jonas, a scientist involved with the Large Hadron Collider (LHC) project at CERN - the European Centre for Nuclear Research in Switzerland, where he has been testing Big-Bang theory.

An Old Nemesis: Katherina Kreng has used the LHC to create matter-annihilating particles - the Killer Strangelets - which could gobble up the planet!

The Solution: an emergency shutdown device hidden somewhere inside the long LHC tunnel, deep beneath the Swiss mountains.

The Problem: Only Jonas knows where it is, and he can't get to it!

The Author - C.T. Furlong

Carol Furlong grew up in Ireland and studied Science at Carlow Institute of Technology, and promptly forgot most of it. After travelling in Europe, working in the music business in London and in the fashion business in Antwerp, a childhood love of adventure stories, coupled with the long neglected interest in science, resulted in the creation of The A.R.C.T.I.C. 6. She is married with two young children and currently lives in the remote wilds of Suffolk.
